A CONTEMPORARY ART NEWS PODCAST

Press Kit

About The Show

By The Way: A Contemporary Art News Podcast is a bi-weekly podcast hosted by two artists and art professionals and has featured topics like: are art fairs good for artists?, the Alt-Right's criticism of The Obama's National portraits, and the influence of "MADE-FOR-INSTAGRAM" exhibitions. The conversation is intimately intertwined with culture, society, law, money, and politics, and no punches are pulled in the discussion.

The Creators

By The Way: A Contemporary Art News Podcast is hosted, written, and produced by Eric Wall. Eric is an artist and art professional with 15+ years of experience in the arts. As an artist, his paintings are exhibited internationally. He has held positions in the arts as an exhibitions technicians, logistics manager, art advisor, to most recently as the Director of one of Scandinavia's largest galleries. Currently based in Stockholm, Sweden, he's lived in Germany, Denmark, and the US, which has given him some unique insights into the contemporary art world.

The show is co-hosted by Ando, an artist living and working in Denmark for the past decade, who has a long-running art podcast called The Undergang Armchair, that presents in depth interviews with internationally known artists, emerging artists, and key figures. Focusing on both Scandinavia and the world at large, it ultimately reveals the nuts and bolts of the contemporary art world.
